Date of next scheduled review: [21 June 2015]

Scheduling of courses must conform to all relevant policies in UME and at the University level pertaining to student time, holidays, and other considerations.

A “shell” of the schedule must be completed by February 15 of the preceding academic year. The scheduling shell is defined as including the following elements:

- For Preclerkship as a whole: start and end dates of each course; examination dates; vacation blocks
- For Clerkship as a whole: start and end dates of each block and sub-rotation in the case of “shared” blocks; vacation blocks
- For Preclerkship block courses (STF, MNU, BRB, and MMMD) and Clerkship didactic courses (TTC, PFL, and TTR-Integration and Fusion): the times when each type of learning modality (lectures, seminars, PBL tutorials, laboratory sessions, examinations, and other sessions) are scheduled.
- For Preclerkship continuity courses (ASCM and DOCH): the type of location of each session; the dates on which assessments will be conducted; any deviations from the normal weekly timeslot.
- For Preclerkship experiential courses (FMLE): the date options of each session; the dates on which assessments will be conducted

The detailed schedule, including the titles of each didactic session¹, must be completed a minimum of six months in advance of the start of any course. Changes to the scheduled classtime should be avoided and under only the most exceptional circumstances should be made with less than two weeks notice. Whenever changes to the shell are required, the course director must communicate with the Preclerkship/Clerkship Director in order to anticipate any effects that may be felt on other courses.

The examination and assessment schedule in both Preclerkship and Clerkship is to be disseminated to students for all courses at the start of the academic year. No examination or assessment date can subsequently be changed without the approval of a simple majority of the affected students.

¹ For clinical clerkship courses, this requirement pertains to central didactic teaching sessions; it is recognized that local teaching may be more flexibly scheduled.
